Lawmakers Eyeing Short-Term Budget With Education Funding Protection.

This article from the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette outlines the unique and daunting budget challenges faced by our state legislature as a result of COVID-19. Of particular interest to teachers is the effort—even in the short term—to preserve existing levels of education funding despite an expected significant state budget shortfall.

It's a promise kept for now on a challenge that continues to evolve. Read the entire article here.

Friday Announcement Expected for Some PA Counties to Move to Green.

This just in from Governor Wolf's Office:

On Friday, the first Pennsylvania counties move into the green phase of COVID-19 reopening. So what does "green" mean?

Your county has done a good job at getting cases down and increasing ICU capacity, and has a lower risk when it comes to population density and travel patterns.

COVID-19 is still out there and is highly contagious, so continue to take safety precautions:

-  Wear a mask around others
-  Practice social distancing
-  Avoid large gatherings

- Practice good health habits

- Continue teleworking where feasible
- Visits to prisons and hospitals can resume
- Nursing home visits remain restricted to protect residents
- Businesses open in the yellow phase can increase to 75% occupancy
- Businesses with closed physical locations can open to 50% capacity
- Construction can ramp back up to full capacity with safety measures in place
- Businesses should consider special accommodations for vulnerable personnel
- All businesses and individuals must follow CDC and Pennsylvania Department of Health guidelines

Update from World Educational Support Personnel Day on May 15, 2020

AFT made sure to make a memorable point at the third-annual conference hosted by Education International (EI), by helping to bring attention to an all-too-often overlooked segment of the education workforce. AFT supports EI's resolution fully—seen below

Education International's declaration on the rights of educational support personnel is a beginning-to-end demand for living wages and decent working conditions for PSRPs worldwide.

For example, the declaration states that support staff must benefit from high-quality, recognized professional training; be valued and respected for their contributions to education; and be protected from outsourcing.
